This paper describes effective ways that the nationally validated Information Technology Skill Standards developed by the NorthWest Center for Emerging Technologies have been used by the Chauncey Group, Division of Educational Testing Service to develop vendor-neutral certification exams in eight IT skill cluster areas. The paper will also describe preparation workshops and educator versions of the exams that allow faculty to demonstrate or certify their expertise in Information Technology, and how educators benefit from the program.