In 1998, the State of California passed new technology standards for teachers and every credential-issuing institution was required to develop methodology and assessments to ensure that candidates exiting their program meet those standards. This brief paper will present methodology for assessing teacher readiness to use technology including: Attitude toward technology, experience with computers and related technologies, ability to meet teacher preparation standards, and professional standards for teaching.