What Students are Saying About the Online Classroom: Is it Accessible to All?

Faculty members are sometimes unsure about how to address the needs of students with disabilities who are experiencing difficulties with the online classroom. Based on a survey of students enrolled in online courses, this session will cover methods to make the online classroom more accessible and “user friendly” for all students including students with disabilities. Specific problems encountered by students with disabilities and possible solutions will be addressed. Course design, accommodations, and a demonstration of assistive technology will be included in this session.
